The EU Union Customs Code (UCC): Risks and Opportunities to Canadians

With the signing of the Canada-EU Comprehensive Economic and Trade Agreement (CETA), Canadian exporters and their service providers are well advised to prepare in order to reap the benefits of some fantastic opportunities ahead.

But as we all know, trade agreements don't eliminate borders, quite the opposite. They highlight the fact that reaping the rewards of tariff elimination comes at a cost: complying with complex customs procedures.

In this seminar you will learn how the new EU Customs Code will change the way goods can enter that promising market. Topics covered will include: Authorized Economic Operator (AEO) update, binding tariff information, the first sale rule, special clearance procedures, the EU concept of customs representation, and many more.

Presenter: Raphael Barazza

Raphael is an experienced French attorney specialized in cross-border trade laws and customs procedures. As a Deputy Representative before the EU Trade Contact Group in Brussels, he has been directly involved in the negotiations with the EU Commission for the implementing provisions of the UCC reform.
